EJECTMENT VERDICT DECLARED VOID BY SUPREME COURT

An interesting decision was rendered today by the Supreme Court in the matter of the action of tort in the case of awarding separate damages to David K. Baker vs. A. M. Brown, L. A. Andrews, A. T. Atkinson and George P. Kamaoaha.

The action is on the case of claiming $10,000 damages for causing the plaintiff's arrest maliciously and for attempting to eject the plaintiff's family from his dwelling house. The jury on January 19, 1905, rendered a verdict for the plaintiff and assessed damages against the defendants as follows: A. T. Atkinson, $2500; A. M. Brown, $500; L. A. Andrews, $500; G. P. Kamaoaha, $1.

On April 25, 1906, the defendants filed a motion to vacate the judgment on the ground that it was based on an irregular and void verdict which was granted and the judgment was accordingly set aside, to which ruling the plaintiff brought a bill of exceptions, contending that the judgment, if erroneous, was not absolutely void and after the final adjournment of the term, could only be vacated on error or exception.

The court made the following decision: That a judgment awarding several damages against the defendants in an action of tort alleging a conspiracy to commit the wrongs charged, is unauthorized by the law which forbids an apportionment of damages in such cases and holds the defendants to a joint liability. The judgment which was rendered was so radically wrong as to be absolutely void and therefore was properly vacated at a subsequent term. The exceptions were therefore overruled.

JUSTICE DEFEATED

ONCE MORE
BY THE POLICE

"Please let my boy go," pleaded an old gray-haired mother of Henry Vida last Saturday. "I'll take him home and take care of him, and I know he'll be good."

Her thin lips were trembling and her old hands shook as she stood before the Sheriff. Little and bowed, gowned in rusty black, her wrinkled face scarred with the furrows which time and sorrow bring to some women.

"Who is your boy and what has he been doing?" inquired the officer. She told him. He had been drunk and for two days had been lying in jail, sobbing up. But he was her boy, and she loved him, and she wanted to take him home.

Vida ordered the man brought up, and he came, hobbling on a cork leg, a weak-appearing man of about 35, one of the kind who get drunk because they are too weak and unstable to know when to quit. The "boy" had all gone out of him, and he was nothing but a drink-shaken wretch, not vicious but merely weak.

But he was the woman's boy. Not the same curly-haired little chap who was once her delight and pride. He was her chief sorrow as a man—but he was her boy, and she wanted to take him home and look after him.

And Vida ordered him dismissed to go home with the trembling old mother.

Once again was justice defeated. Another act of malfeasance in office had been perpetrated. But a mother got her boy back again.
